YOUR GOD IS TOO SMALL

Many years ago, I picked up a book entitled, "Your God is Too Small," mostly because the title intrigued me. As a Catholic, I believed that God was a trinity of three persons, Father, Son and Holy Spirit. How can the author tell me that my God was too small? What I can remember of his argument was that, though we may hold an orthodox belief in God, on the functioning level of prayer we can reduce God to something else, something less.

Jesus told us that at the end of time, "when the Son of Man comes in his glory, and all the angels with him, he will sit upon his glorious throne and all the nations will be assembled before him. And he will separate them one from another as a shepherd separates sheep from goats." Until then Jesus can be thought of as a "Resident Policeman," someone who keeps track of who's good and who's not. Jesus is seen as just, but this image does little to express his forgiveness and mercy.

If you are in the habit of watching The Late Show with Stephen Colbert, you will have witnessed occasions when God appears on the ceiling of the theater to comment on current events. He looks like a "Grand Old Man," with a robe, flowing hair and a deep resonating voice. He doesn't look very different from the way God the Father was pictured in the catechism and simple religious books I saw in my youth. God, being divine, is beyond old, of course, but seeing him in this way can give the impression that he is distant from us, which he is not.

Jesus preached, "Blessed are the meek, for they will inherit the land." One could infer that he was himself "Meek-and-Mild," and wanted his disciples to be nice too. But I don't think that tells the whole story. The author, Philip Yancey, has asked, "How would telling people to be nice to one another get a man crucified? What government would execute Mister Rogers or Captain Kangaroo?" Jesus is also the one who "cleansed" the Temple, overturning tables with violence and a whip. Jesus was determined and courageous.

I can imagine God as a "Managing Director." I can see him seated at his heavenly control panel, looking down to earth through the lenses of a huge set of binoculars, barking orders to his attending angels, determining who lives and who dies, who gets grace and how much and who goes without. An archangel oversees the weather but doesn't do a great job; some places are deserts and other places are flooded. Saints come and go, interceding for this or that person or group. He is the nexus of all this activity. True, God is in charge, but I can't imagine him doing it as a control freak.

If you think of the Bible as the account of a love story between the creator and his creatures, you will want to read it to find out who this God is really is. You will read to see God in all his moods and dreams and purposes. You will want to find out why he did what he did, and you will discover the variety of ways in which his creatures have responded to his love. If we don't want to be accused of having a God who is too small, we should read the story closely to catch the endless manifestations of his nature and life. Only such a God is big enough to command our highest admiration and respect.

Msgr. Mike

This will be an evening filled with prayer, reflection, and worship!

FAITH FORMATION

Another great year is under way for our PreK-8th grade faith formation program! We have 74 students enrolled in our classes. Diocesan speaker Pam Hurwitz began our first day with a talk to parents about creating lasting family traditions and slowing down to enjoy the quiet small moments of family life. Our 2nd grade is has 17 students already busy preparing for first reconciliation in December. We have two new catechists this year: Mrs. Enriquez and Mrs. Carl. Returning catechists and aides are Mr. Silver, Mrs. Fiori, Mrs. Souza, Mrs. Scandura, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Gotoski, and Mrs. Littleford. Please pray for our students and their families as they make their faith journey with Jesus.
