SUMMER

Once we hit Independence Day, summer was in full swing. The “June gloom” has dispersed, thank God. Shorts, T-shirts and flip-flops are standard attire, although Seal Beach doesn’t ever have a season when anyone really dresses up. Some, having applied their sunscreen, go to the beach, especially if the waves are big enough for body surfing

Since there is so much sunlight, hiking is popular during the summer. In southern California, you don’t have to go far to find a place to walk, either along the beaches or up into the hills. I recall a particular hike when I was serving in Yorba Linda. The trail I followed started off easy enough but soon became steeper and steeper. I was so pleased when I finally got to the top and took in the view. What I hadn’t realized was that the trip down would be even more difficult as the steep decline was harder to navigate without sliding.

These days people go away on vacations or just sit out lounging in their backyards, telling stories and grilling hot dogs on the barbeque as the sun very slowly sets.

Summer is supposed to be the time to get a few things done around the house: you know, clean out the garage, paint the trim on the house, organize and rearrange the items in the pantry. But often enough these items do not get checked off the list because summer is long, we tell ourselves; we’ll get to them next week.

We’d prefer to try something new. When I was a seminarian, I used to spend my summers working in a parish; it gave me a feel of what the day-to-day life of a priest might be like. I remember offering a class entitled, “Spirituality for Those Who Don’t Feel Very Spiritual.” I got a lot of people who came just to discover what unspiritual spirituality was like. I was amazed that I could talk for forty minutes each week and still have something to say the next week.

I also spent a few summers working on a vast estate of a rich woman who liked vegetables and flowers and she had four of us gardeners to make sure she was well supplied. There were wide lawns like fairways to mow and, since I was the youngest, it became my duty to use the manual lawnmower to trim the grass on the sides of steep inclines while the older men rode around the level areas sitting on power mowers.

Beware of how you spend your summer. As a young man, the Greek writer, Nikos Kazantzakis, spent a summer in a monastery during which he had a series of conversations with an old monk.

One day he asked the old monk: “Father, do you still battle with the devil?”

The old monk replied: “No, I used to, when I was younger, but now I have grown old and tired and the devil has grown old and tired with me. I leave him alone and he leaves me alone.”

“So, your life is easy then?” asked Kazantzakis. “Oh no,” replied the monk, “it’s much worse, now I wrestle with God!”

INTRODUCING SHELLY

One and a half years ago we hired Shelly Barbre as our wedding coordinator. Many parishioners don't realize how valuable this position is in assisting the parish office by handling the many details involved in marriage planning, conducting the wedding rehearsal and then assisting the families and the priest during the ceremony. Shelly came to us with a background in hotel hospitality, event planning and catering. Her Catholic faith, efficiency and pleasant personality are truly a blessing to those celebrating this sacrament at St. Anne.
