SAINT PAUL

After Jesus, Saint Paul takes up the most space in the New Testament. He appears in the Acts of the Apostles which tells first of his zeal in persecuting the followers of Jesus and then the story of his dramatic conversion on the road to Damascus. The Acts then goes on to detail the apostolic journeys he made in preaching the gospel of Jesus all around Palestine, Syria, Macedonia, Greece, Arabia and Rome.

We learn a lot about him and the communities he founded or visited by his letters. Many brides and grooms know Paul from the passage in his first letter to the Corinthians:

“Love is patient, love is kind. It is not jealous. It is not pompous, it is not inflated. It is not rude, it does not seek its own interests, it is not quick tempered...” It is perennially chosen to be read at weddings.

His most theological letter was to the Romans. Paul did not himself establish the Roman community and so, before he went there, he wanted to prepare the way by describing his religious views. The other letters were often taken up with practical matters. He calls out the Corinthians: “First of all, I hear that when you meet as a church there are divisions among you.” In Galatians he defends the gospel he preached against those in the community that insisted that male disciples be circumcised, saying: “For neither does circumcision mean anything nor does uncircumcision, but only a new creation.” In Ephesians he praises the diversity of roles within the community: “And [Christ] gave some as apostles, others as prophets, others as evangelists, others as pastors and teachers to equip the holy ones for the work of ministry.” In Philippians he assured the community that, though he is imprisoned, “I want you to know, brothers, that my situation has turned out rather to advance the gospel so that my imprisonment has become well known in Christ throughout the whole praetorium and to all the rest.” (A praetorium was the residence and administrative center for a Roman governor.)

Paul takes up a variety of themes in his letters to the Thessalonians. He exhorts the community how to conduct themselves: “This is the will of God, your holiness: that you refrain from immorality, that each of you know how to acquire a wife for himself in holiness and honor, not in lustful passions as do the Gentiles who do not know God.” His second letter to the Thessalonians is short and to the point: “We ask you, brothers, with regard to the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ and our assembling with him, not to be shaken out of your minds suddenly [by someone who tells you] that the day of the Lord is at hand.”

Paul frequently includes poems or the lyrics to hymns in his letters. Christ “is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn of all creation. For in him were created all things in heaven and earth, the visible and the invisible, whether throne or dominions or principalities or powers...” Scholars believe, for example, that the previous passage was from a liturgical hymn that the Colossians, who he was writing to, were already aware of.

Four other letters—two to Timothy, one to Titus and one to Philemon—are different; they are to individuals who were pastoring their congregations. Timothy was Paul’s convert and he was often sent by Paul on special missions. Titus was left in Crete by Paul to organize the community and Paul wrote to give him direction. The Letter to Philemon is written about the situation of Onesimus, a slave who had run away from his master, and whom Paul was sending back to his master but with the request that he be welcomed, not punished.

I love Paul’s letters because his full character comes out so vividly. He is encouraging, disciplining, explaining, instructing and reciting hymns and poems. There nothing he denies the disciples. Everything that he is and all that he knows, he gives to them. You might give some thought to reading a chapter of St. Paul each day as part of your prayer. (I recommend the New American Bible, Revised Edition, translation; it has very helpful footnotes that fill you in on what Paul is referring to.)
