AFFLICTED

In a few short months, our strong, vibrant, rambunctious planet has been severely stung by a virus, which can be as small as 20 nanometers, but causing our global pandemic. We have suddenly been confronted by our vulnerability and it makes us fearful not only for ourselves and loved ones but for strangers everywhere.

During this season, I have mostly been saying private Masses at home at my dining room table. When I come to the prayer of the faithful, I imagine all whom I am praying for. I see my family, I see vulnerable patients in nursing homes near and far, I see first responders in their masks and face protectors, I see nurses and doctors in Congo and Guatemala trying over long hours to attend to their patients, I see the patients in ICU units having to die without their loved ones with them, never being able to say goodbye.

When I go over to the grocery market, I see the cashiers keeping good spirits as they handle the contents of my shopping basket and the money I give to pay for the items, while other workers are restacking the emptying shelves and setting out fresh fruits and vegetables. Keep going back up the chain and see the farmer workers and farm owners who grow the produce and the truckers who bring the harvest to my market. I see our bishops around the world and international political leaders and researchers and experts trying to make very difficult decisions, decisions I am very glad not to have to make.

I see you.

Recently I turned on my television to see Long Beach burning, all those protesters with others—unfortunately, looters—and I see the officers, sheriffs and National Guard trying to keep or restore order. The firefighters and their captains trying to understand what they were dealing with in their attempt to quell the flames. I recognize places there where I have been, streets on which I walked and shopped, distorted now into something very different. Isn't that near where I used to go to the matinee on my days off? I see the reporters and photographers who put themselves in the midst of the melee so I can know what the heck is going on in the chaos. I see the owners looking out at the burnt shells of their places of business.

I think everybody of faith wonders where God is in all this. Pope Francis said, "While painfully aware of our own frailties, we have to march on without giving in, keeping in mind what the Lord said to Saint Paul: 'My grace is sufficient for you, for my power is made perfect in weakness'" (2 Cor. 12:9).

Personally I think being weak sucks. As you probably have noticed, I have a low tolerance for discomfort. I signed on to my vocation to be the swashbuckling leader out in front, yelling, "Charge!" But for all of us there are funerals which will take place for family and friends that we may not be able to attend. Grief may be our lot now, and the fear about what may be coming next. We have been afflicted and it's been going on for months and who knows how much longer.

Maybe this affliction has something to teach us. Maybe we can find the grace within the loneliness. Maybe we will see something about ourselves that we had worked very hard not to see. But that will likely only be the case if we are able to stay with our vulnerability. After all, it's been long enough that we have run through all of our distractions. Instead of being bored out of our minds, maybe we can, as they used to say, suck it up. Well, but maybe only with a big dose of God's grace.

Rainer Maria Rilke, the poet and writer, advised: "Just . . . wish you may find in yourself enough patience to endure and enough simplicity to have faith; that you may gain more and more confidence in what is difficult and in your solitude among other people. And, as far as the rest, let life happen to you. Believe me: life is in the right, always."

ENVIRONMENTAL TIPS

LAUDATO Si'

With the warmer weather under way, consider drying your laundry on a clothesline. They save energy and your laundry will smell fantastic! Don't have one? Many umbrella styles are now available online, and some can even be stored in your garage or shed when not in use. Don't have a yard to put a clothesline? Reduce your carbon footprint by only running your dryer when it's full (every 2-3 wash loads).

"Let every knee bend before Thee, O greatness of my God, so supremely humbled in the Sacred Host. May every heart love Thee, every spirit adore Thee and every will be subject to Thee!"
